Pattammal06:053 Asainthadum Mayil06:314Carnatic Violin - T N Krishnan Part 1 06:12 Men's Health If 2020 were a Batman movie it would be Batman & Robin. What had so much potential (George Clooney/ Arnold Schwarzenegger/ Uma goddamn Thurman) was promptly dashed by one hell of a plot-twist that quickly went south. But like Batman & Robin, there's one silver lining amidst all the disappointment and frustration: a really, really good soundtrack. Although you won't see anything from The Smashing Pumpkins or Bone Thugs N Harmony on our list of the best songs of 2020 so far, you will find some throwbacks mixed in with modern classics.2020 has brought back stalwarts like Fiona Apple, The Rolling Stones, and Bruce Springsteen. It's flooded Spotify with incredible dance tracks, like those by Disclosure. And it's produced a flight of female indie-rock bands and artists that tug and the heartstrings and pound at the temples all at the same time. (Here's looking at you Phoebe Bridgers.)Our list of the best songs of 2020 may not be exactly what you expect from Men's Health, but if 2020 has a theme, it's the unexpected. Follow this playlist on Spotify here.Sign up for Spotify Premium here. "The Bigger Picture" by Lil Baby 2020 has produced its fair share of protest music, but this trenchant track from breakout rapper Lil Baby distinguishes itself with raw vulnerability and creative sampling. It's not just a song—it's a wake-up call to a country that's failed to confront police brutality, systemic racism, and oppression. When we look back on this often agonizing year, this track—which directly references and honors George Floyd, Breonna Taylor, and other Black Americans who were killed by the state—will be seared in the memories of many. "My High" by Disclosure feat. slowthai & Aminé 2020 shut the club down (and not in a good way), but that didn't stop DJs from cranking capital-J Jams. The beat is relentless and the assists from two enigmatic MCs infuse "My High" with energy, which just so happens to be the name of Disclosure's latest album filled with dance floor anthems. "exile" by Taylor Swift feat. Bon Iver This duet, produced by Aaron Dessner of The National, is a gut-punch and is liable to get you misty-eyed no matter how many times you've played it. Stripped-back Taylor Swift is the best Taylor Swift, and this soaring, melancholic ballad is at turns triumphant and devastating, assisted by Bon Iver's Justin Vernon, who does what he does best: rip your goddamn heart out. "As Many Candles As Possible" by The Mountain Goats Few bands have been as prolific or as consistently excellent as The Mountain Goats. John Darnielle, a rock lyricist of the highest order, delivers a vocal performance that's bracing and urgent, anchored by a group of players that have rarely sounded tighter. Gets better with each play. "Letter to You" by Bruce Springsteen The Boss still rocks. The Jersey born-and-bred septuagenarian proves as much on this hard-charging, earnest single featuring the E Street Band. It sounds like classic Bruce—drawing particularly on sonic textures from The Rising era—but also couldn't sound more urgent and of the moment in 2020. "Dynamite" by BTS If you haven't listened to this bop from K-pop megastars BTS, beware: It will become so firmly lodged in your consciousness that you'll be humming the hook for weeks. It's a relentlessly feel-good tune that manages to be catchy without being annoying, and represents yet another milestone in BTS's gradual takeover of the modern pop universe. "Gasoline" by Haim It's hard to pick just one HAIM song for a best of 2020 list, but this Rostam-assisted cut distinguishes itself thanks to Danielle Haim's lead vocals and loose, lower-fi production. It's an excellent driving song, at once seductive and searching. "Hit Different" by SZA feat. Ty Dolla Sign & The Neptunes How has it been three years since SZA's iconic studio debut album CTRL? In the time since, SZA's guested on a few tracks and featured on soundtracks like Black Panther and Trolls: World Tour, but this sultry track feels the most spiritually connected to that 2017 record. It's a vibe unto itself. "Hello Hello Hello" by Remi Wolf Is anyone having as much fun as Remi Wolf? Her 2020 EP I'm Allergic to Dogs! is whimsical and wonderful, and this groovy song is a standout. We could describe Remi's vibe, but the first line of her bio kinda says it all: "Remi Wolf is a crazy bih but is also hella nice and sweet sometimes but also likes to yell at people but has figured out that maybe instead of yelling at people she can just sing and scream at the people on stage when she's in the mood to make money and act like a daddy dom." "Ferris Wheel" by Sylvan Esso This song from the Durham, North Carolina-based duo Sylvan Esso seems tailor-made for cabin fever dance freakouts or simply making you feel a little bit cooler walking down the street. "WAP" by Cardi B feat. Megan Thee Stallion The song that launched a million TikToks, WAP could be considered a largely feminist anthem, one advocating for sexual fulfillment and giving rise to the cryptic phrase, "macaroni in a pot." "Dollar - Cha Cha Version" by Electric Guest This one's about being down-and-out (an apparent theme of 2020) with just a buck to your name (dittos) and still doing the very best you can to be okay with that. Go on, clap along. "Deleters" by Holy Fuck. Angus Andrew Holy Fuck is a Toronto-based electronica band. Angus Andrew is the founder of Liars, an Australian-American electronic-punk band. If that sounds like a weird marriage, it is. Gloriously so. "Baby" by Four Tet The prolific English DJ mixes a stutter-step of a beat with clipped lyrics and song structure that stops and starts. Yet the whole 4:24 has a warm and re-listenable tone worth immersing your troubles into. "Never Come Back" by Caribou Is 2020 the return of electronica? There's something strangely comforting about the vocals, which are steady and simple, though haunting about how things may never return to what they were. "Know Your Worth" by Khalid, Disclosure You know Khalid from "Eastside" his 2018 hit with Halsey, but here he anchors a track set to breakout beatmakers Disclosure in a feel-good jam about keeping your head up. "Lost in Yesterday" by Tame Impala Embrace all the fuzz in this dreamy track from the one-man-band of Kevin Parker. It's the perfect accompaniment to a year where the space-time continuum has warped and folded onto itself. "Tondo" by Disclosure, Eko Roosevelt There's so much funk in this horn-blaring, chant-shouting, bass-flopping dance track that you'll need to shower after bumping through its wild five-and-a-half-minutes. "Running Red Lights" by The Avalanches, Rivers Cuomo, Pink Siifu This ethereal laid-back track joins the Australian Kings of the Throwback Sample with the Weezer frontman and everyone's favorite Alabama-based underground experimental rapper. Bizarre, yes, but delightfully so. "Fire" by Waxahatchee Katie Crutchfield's 2020 LP 'Saint Cloud' is an outdoor album, meaning its sonic textures bring to mind summer bontires and long joyrides down unpaved, empty country roads. And in a time where we all feel a little cooped up, songs like "Fire" present a welcome release from the mundanity and claustrophobia of everyday. "Golden Oldies" by R.A. The Rugged Man, Atmosphere, Famon If there's a year we could just use a little more levity, it's 2020. So spend the three-plus minutes to bounce along to this self-aware generational diss track that features throwback name-checks to Patrick Swayze, Salt N Peppa, and Gang Starr. "Lockdown Blues" by Iceage The Danish punk rock band is known for their hard-changing sound, and this COVID-19-centric single is an all-out assault on the stir-crazies. "Hollywood" by Car Seat Headrest If you're fed up with celebrity culture, particularly in the time of pandemic (because, seriously, J. Lo and A. Rod, just stop), this noisy track can relate. "Chocolate Souffle" by Shabazz Palaces It's funk. It's hip-hop. It's funny. It's all about to fall apart at any minute. And it's probably the strangest 5:00 minutes you'll spend today. Probably. "Heavy Balloon" by Fiona Apple is unchained in this bare-bones cut off her legendary album from this year. Fiona, we hear you. And thank you. "Unholy Ghosts" by David Keenan This tune evokes the folksy busker energy that seems spiritually descendant from the great Irish busker romance film Once. Keenan's Irish brogue lingers over soaring violins and twinkling mandolins, transporting the listener straight to the singer-songwriter's native Dundalk. "Brave" by Ruston Kelly Ruston Kelly has been through some shit. On "Brave," he has one eye on adversity from the not-so-distant past—addiction, broken promises—and one eye on the distant future ("That's how I hope I'm remembered when I die"). Be prepared: this song is a sledgehammer straight to your heart. "Kyoto" by Phoebe Bridgers The devil's in the details when it comes to the songwriting of Phoebe Bridgers, which often strings together hyper-specific anecdotes and observations to create something that feels wholly original. "Kyoto" is Peak Bridgers: lyrics about death, a sad chorus that sounds happy on its face, and those triumphant horns. "QADIR" by Nick Hakim You don't listen to a Nick Hakim song—you sink into it. His neo-soul soundscapes envelope you (headphones are recommended), luscious in their orchestration and anchored by Hakim's spooky, silky croon. Over 7-plus minutes takes a creeping groove and spins it into a psychedelic freakout. Like Hakim's best compositions, "QADIR" is a trip. "Delete Forever" by Grimes This track showcases the noted provocateur Claire Boucher in a relatively stripped-back and un-avant-garde manner. A strummed acoustic guitar anchors this tune that only gets catchier each time you play it. "People, I've Been Sad" by Christine and the Queens If you're a human being in the Year 2020, there's a good chance you've been feeling a lot of feelings. French art pop chanteuse Christine and the Queens wants you to feel MORE feelings on this bilingual bop. "Simmer" by Hayley Williams When you're the lead singer of one of the most beloved pop-punk bands of the 21st century, it's a tall order to break out and distinguish yourself as a solo artist. But that's exactly what Hayley Williams has been able to pull off on "Petals For Armor" her ambitious new record, which features this groovy single that's propelled by a "wait-what-the-hell-am-I-watching" gem of an enigmatic music video. "Cloud 9" by Beach Bunny We dare you to not top your head along to this rocking love song from Chicago four-piece Beach Bunny. It's even better when you find out that lead singer Lili Trifilio dedicated the song to her "little snail son Nigel" who recently passed away. We miss you, Nige! "Dragonball Durag" by Thundercat This funky-as-hell, bass-driven come-on gives the artist also known as Stephen Bruner the runaway early lead for Best Lyric of 2020: "I may be covered in cat hair, but I still smell good." "circle the drain" by Soccer Mommy This song sounds like a tribute to the '90s alt attitude of Sheryl Crow, Natalie Imbruglia, and Alanis Morissette, filtered through the angsty-yet-vulnerable perspective of 22-year-old songwriter Sophie Allison. It's an instant classic. "Living In a Ghost Town" by The Rolling Stones In unfamiliar times, it's a blessing to be able to return to the familiar.
